Serious issue that 30% of pupils distracted by mobile phones during lessons

04 June 2024 Photo: Fredrik Storm/Government Offices

Young people's use of mobile phones at school negatively affects their performance. This was the theme when Minister for Schools Lotta Edholm took part in a seminar organised by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), where decision-makers and experts from various countries convened to discuss screen time in classrooms and the consequences of forbidding it.

Government investing in more reading time and less screen time

Pupils' ability to read and understand what they read is the foundation of their learning in all school subjects. The Swedish Government's school policy aims to get back to basics and re-establish a strong knowledge-based school system with the focus in early grades on basic skills such as reading, writing and arithmetic. Digital learning aids should only be introduced in teaching at an age when they promote, rather than hamper, pupils' learning.
